Request from Council Member Popp to cement Jane Sarles' legacy by changing Line Drive to Jane Sarles Lane...

Clarksville has a rich and unique history that deserves to be cherished and celebrated; no one has been more passionate about Clarksville history than Jane Sarles.

Jane was born in Campbellsburg, IN but moved to Clarksville in 1947 to the Greenacres Subdivision, which was under construction at that time. She says it was better known then as "Mud Acres", which was the source of some ribbing from the kids in Old Clarksville. She attended New Albany High School, paying $25.00 per semester as a tuition charge.

In 1967 she began working at the IU Southeast Library, raising her three children-Denise, Christopher, and Patrick-with her husband Jerry while working on her Bachelor's Degree in English Education. Jane completed her student teaching at Clarksville High School,-splitting time between the English classroom under Dr. Dot Lewis and the library under Jamie Lamb. She would later graduate from IUS and go on to earn a Master's Degree from the Graduate Library School at IU Bloomington.

Jane's career as a professional librarian included stops at junior high schools in Bedford, at Jeffersonville Township Public Library, Charlestown Public Library, and once again at IUS>

Her final position was at Lanesville High School, where she spent 13 years servicing grades K-12

In her retirement Jane turned her energy to Clarksville and Southern Indiana and immersed herself full-time in its history. She has become the hub of historical knowledge for the Town, and ensures our connection to the past is not lost or simply filed away. She was president of the Clarksville Historical Society for 13 years, Vice Chair of the Ohio River Greenway Commission from 2004-2012, a board member for the Falls of the Ohio Foundation, “a current member of the Buffalo Trace Commission, and past chair of the Clarksville Historic Preservation Commission, of which she is also a member. In 2014 she was named Clarksville Town Historian. Jane has authored four books: Clarksville, Indiana (2001), Looking Back (2012), Clarksville: Then & Now (2014), and A History Lover’s Guide to Kentuckiana (2015).

For her contributions Jane has been honored numerous times. She is an honorary member of the Indiana Historical Society, was named an Ambassador of Clark County by the Clark County Commissioners, nominated as a finalist for Clark County Woman of the Year and receive the John H. Minta Tourism Award from the Clark-Floyd Convention and Tourism Bureau.

In addition to her love of history she also enjoys travel, having visited five different continents and 48 different states. She has a great deal of pride for her three grandchildren, who she describes as “exceptional” and “wonderful”. She’s expecting her first great grandchild very soon.

Jane Sarles’ appreciation of Clarksville history is unsurpassed. The Town’s archives are a monument of her passion and hard work. She has brought honor to our community through her pride and tireless efforts telling us the stories of our past. Clarksville is a better place because of Jane. And with that in mind, it is a please to cement her legacy and honor her contributions to the Town of Clarksville with the commemorations f Jane Sarles Lane.
