WHERE'S ARGO?

Can you find
Clarksville's Police
K-9, Argo, hiding on 4 different pages
throughout this magazine?

A new year is upon us, one holding great promise for a return to school, work, good health and one another.

As we move together toward more normal times, I am pleased to say that the Town's partnerships continue with offerings of free COVID-19 testing at the Community Center and a centrally located vaccination site on Lewis and Clark Parkway.

We hope that this issue of the Town magazine shares information you will find helpful and interesting. Within these pages, you will be introduced to the Town's new Redevelopment Director, Nic Langford. We are excited for him to step into his new role and are confident that he will continue the forward progress of Clarksville.

The Town has recently adopted a street grid concept for what will someday become Clarksville's downtown riverfront and has chosen to continue Clarksville's historical narrative by naming the newly proposed streets after brave members of the Lewis and Clark Expedition.

In this edition, we welcome Clarksville's newest restaurant, Joella's Hot Chicken, and spotlight a community favorite, William's Bakery. Our Town has a rich history built upon strong neighborhoods. The Clarksville Historic Preservation Commission recently began the process of establishing what it hopes will become the Town's second historic neighborhood, Centralia Court, with other neighborhoods to follow.

And finally, spring and warmer weather will be back with us before you know it. Please remember to check out the newly developed Discovery Trail if you plan on getting outside and active. The Police Department recently created its first Bicycle Patrol, where officers will ensure the continued safety of our first-class pedestrian trail system.

In all the many trials of the past year, I have been inspired by the grit, humanity and resiliency of our citizens, and I pray for better health and brighter outcomes as we enter 2021 together.

With warm regards,

Ryan Ramsey,
Clarksville Town Council President

MEET CLARKSVILLE'S NEW REDEVELOPMENT DIRECTOR

Nicolas Langford

Nicolas Langford will serve as the Town of Clarksville's new Redevelopment Director, succeeding previous director Dylan Fisher.

Langford has served the Town for more than two years as the Town's Redevelopment Associate. During this time, he has assisted with several prominent redevelopment projects including the Discovery Trail Project, the Town of Clarksville Small Business COVID-19 relief program and other economic stimulus projects to help generate revenue for the Town of Clarksville.

In this new role, Langford will help Clarksville achieve short and long-range goals through strategic planning for future development and redevelopment, with a focus on investment opportunities and branding.

He was selected as Clarksville's Redevelopment Director from a group of more than 20 applicants. Doug Thomas from Strategic Government Resources assisted the Town with the search, interview and selection process.

"We chose Nic, as he is an enthusiastic public servant with ever growing knowledge of real estate development including purchasing, who has developed requests for proposals, and is familiar with our redevelopment process," said Clarksville Town Manager Kevin Baity. "We know Nic can help Clarksville achieve our short and long-range redevelopment goals."

In recent years, the Town has identified opportunities for significant investment and redevelopment along the riverfront in South Clarksville, where the area's economy and culture have been tied to the river for centuries. This includes a push to advance the Riverfront's marketability, livability, and desirability to boost economic opportunities and turn the area into a vibrant mixed-use district with public gathering spaces, walkable streets, bicycle trails, shopping, dining, and entertainment venues anchored by the river, with a dazzling view of the Louisville skyline.

Langford has a Bachelor's degree in Public Administration from the University of Kansas and a Master's degree in Public Administration from the University of Louisville. He began his new role as Redevelopment Director in January. When he's out of the office, he enjoys hiking, camping, traveling and spending time with his family and dogs.

Q&A

What is your proudest accomplishment while working for the Town of Clarksville?

Discovery Trail, a fantastic quality of life project.

What upcoming project are you most excited about & why?

I am excited about our South Clarksville project. There is a ton of unexplored potential waiting to be redeveloped into a visionary plan.

What is your favorite thing about Clarksville?

I'm a big fan of the amazing Mexican restaurants we have around here. They're the best I've had anywhere!

How has COVID-19 impacted redevelopment efforts in Clarksville?

COVID-19 has increased construction material costs for contractors, changed consumer habits and created some general uncertainty in the market. The pandemic has made me learn to adapt to keep current redevelopment projects on track during fluid times.

What is the most challenging and most rewarding part of the redevelopment process?

Redevelopment varies so widely that there is not one definitive "challenging" part of the process; however, I think the most rewarding is when a project is in its infancy and you can figure out how to "make it fly." You run multiple feasibility tests and find the one that will move the project forward. That's a cool feeling.

What did you learn during your time as Redevelopment Associate that prepared you for your new role?

Projects need community support. Ultimately, I am a public servant and need to focus on projects that will serve the public; that can range from developing attractive housing to building out a recreational trail. Regardless of the project, the focus must always be on improving Clarksville and enhancing the lives of our citizens, for current and future generations.

KEEP IT LOCAL:
William's Bakery

One of Clarksville’s oldest businesses, William’s Bakery, opened its doors in 1903. As a full-service bakery offering breads, cakes, cookies, candies, donuts, pastries and more, it’s a local staple in the Clarksville community today for its nostalgic charm and famously delicious donuts.

Its distinguishing focus on family tradition is partially why it has been so prominent in the community for so many years, says Owner Earnest Polston and Wife Debbie Polston. Many families take pride in supporting their favorite local bakery and pass along that heritage to their children.

“It’s a family tradition for so many families,” said Debbie. “Their children grow up and they start coming in and then their children’s children follow the tradition. It’s a wonderful thing to see.”

Part of some family traditions is to have William’s Bakery bake your wedding cake, and the bakery has had the privilege of providing wedding cakes spanning across as many as six generations of a single family.

It’s not just a bakery for the locals though. People visiting from out-of-town make it a point to stop by and grab a melt-in-your-mouth pastry or two when visiting Clarksville. Their food items are freshly baked in-house every day, and what doesn’t get purchased is donated to the Community Kitchen in Jeffersonville to feed the local homeless community.

Much like many local businesses across the United States, the COVID-19 pandemic has proved challenging for this local bakery; however, the Town of Clarksville was able to provide relief funds by granting William’s Bakery a recipient of the Indiana Office of Community & Rural Affairs (OCRA) forgivable loan program.

If you’re looking for ways to support your local business community during this time, be sure to visit William’s Bakery for its delicious treats and baked goods. The bakery looks forward to serving its guests via curbside, drive-thru and in-person.

CLARKSVILLE CARES

The purpose of Clarksville Cares is quite simple – to serve and care for all needs of CCSC children, specifically those who would otherwise go without.

In 2013, teachers and administrators began noticing an increase in anxiety and lack of focus in some of their students in the days leading up to extended breaks. Upon further investigation, they discovered that these were side-effects of food insecurity. For these students, their only guaranteed meals came from breakfasts and lunches prepared by the school.

In an effort to provide comfort and reassurance to these students and their families, Clarksville Cares Food Packs were created. With the help of members of the community and school staff, Clarksville Cares serves students throughout the year, not just during designated times and breaks. So far, they have helped over 800 K-12 students and have expanded to provide Christmas gift support during the holiday season.

Clarksville Community School Corporation is fortunate to partner with many groups, organizations, and individuals who share the desire to pay forward their blessings by giving back to our children and our community. Despite the financial impact COVID-19 has had on many members of the community, Clarksville Cares donors did not forget the kids. The program has received continuous support throughout the pandemic.

As you can imagine, the economic effects of COVID-19 and the transition to distance learning have increased the need for assistance in the community. Thankfully, the Clarksville community is small and tight-knit allowing staff and administrators to recognize when a need arises and offer assistance through the program.

It is difficult for our students to focus on learning when they are concerned about food, clothing, and shelter. Clarksville Cares works to relieve that burden so that CCSC students can achieve their fullest potential.

The best way to get involved and help the children in our community is through monetary and food donations. For more information, contact Renaissance Academy at 812-258-9040 and visit <https://www.clarksvilleschools.org/clarksville-cares>.

“Thank you for your support!”

We always thank our donors for their generosity. I would, however, like to take this opportunity to publicly thank them again for all they do for us. The unique efforts of this community are not seen everywhere and those of us who work with Clarksville Cares from the school are proud to be a part of its mission.

- Brian Allred, Ph.D. Assistant Superintendent
Clarksville Community School Corporation

DISCOVERY TRAIL POLICE PATROL

Starting in the spring of 2021, the Clarksville Police Department will add a Bike Patrol to address the continuing growth of the Clarksville community.

The Town of Clarksville has recently added several new bicycles and walking trails. In order to provide safety for our local community, The Clarksville Bike Patrol has been created to provide patrols and protection for those visiting the Discovery Trail.

Officers will patrol in pairs on special equipped mountain bikes with lights, siren and patrol service equipment. The officers will be required to attend special training as part of this new division of the Clarksville Police Department.

This will be a great benefit to the department. This bike patrol will not only be used on pedestrian trails but also at special events such as Thunder Over Louisville and Clark-Fest.

CENTRALIA COURT

As part of its project to acknowledge Clarksville’s historic neighborhoods, the Historical Preservation Commission recently submitted the Centralia Court subdivision to the state for historic neighborhood designation. While state approval may take as much as two years to complete, we thought you might like to know about this interesting part of our town.

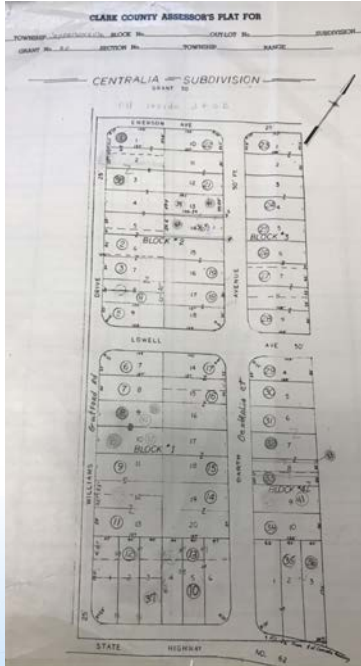

In 1926 the Graham family, through intermediaries F. Shirley Wilcox, Jr. and Ira Wilcox, deeded Part Number 30 of the Illinois Grant to Charles and Theresa Barth, Samuel and Edith Baxter and Irvin and Grace Bence.

The Centralia Court subdivision plat was then laid out with sixteen residential lots delineated on the east side of Gutford Road, then called County Road, and sixteen residential lots on either side of Centralia Court, then called Barth Avenue. Ten lots facing Providence Way, then called State Highway 31W were laid out for businesses.

In 1928, the Baxter and the Bence families built houses in the second block of the plat. Ira and Augusta Wilcox built a house on the same side of the street across what is now Lowell Avenue, a rough alley that the neighbors called “The Ash Road” (so named because the surface of the road was the ashes from their furnaces that the men in the neighborhood spread on the road). The Trinler family then built a home across the street in the first block while the Ruoff family built the home on the hill at the end of the court.

The subdivision was designed to attract well-to-do members of the New Albany community and covenants required that any house built in the plat had to cost at least $3,500. In all, thirty-six homes were constructed from the late 1920s to the 1970s, with most homes built in the 1930s and 1940s. An early selling point for lots in Centralia Court was that the subdivision lay on the route of the Interurban which connected from New Albany, and New Albany’s Glenwood Park, through Clarksville, to Jeffersonville and, after the 1929 opening of the Second Street Bridge, into Louisville.

Fun Fact:

For many years Centralia Court was served by a vegetable truck owned by “Bud” Falkenstein. Mr. Falkenstein’s truck came down the street on Wednesdays and Saturdays with fresh fruits and vegetables. In later years Mr. Falkenstein carried more “exotic” items such as olive oil or artichokes and he would patiently instruct his customers as to their use.
